PAPA'S METAPHOR

Papa's metaphor for life is a three-legged stool. He says that one leg represents the professional, one leg represents the spiritual and the third one represents family and friends. If each one is given equal attention, then the stool remains stable. More often than not, the person who kept the stool stable in our family was Grammy. You see, Grammy thought every day was a "holiday," and no one could celebrate like Grammy! Whether we gathered around the kitchen while she made tuna fish and stuffed eggs while Papa made some pimento cheese to throw into a picnic basket or we set the table with china and crystal while smells of turkey and dressing and pumpkin pies came from the kitchen – every day was meant to be celebrated. And did we celebrate! Sometimes we celebrated the professional – a new job, an "A" in school or just making it through the week! Sometimes it was the spiritual – Christmas, Easter or a baptism. Sometimes it was family and friends – birthdays, cheer-up days or anniversaries. But most times, it was a blend of the three – taking whatever circumstances existed, throwing in some family and friends, adding thanksgiving to the Lord for all He had provided, and serving up good food to eat. And thanks to Grammy and Papa, it always equaled a holiday! Our wish here at Holiday Deli & Ham Co. is that you, too, will find ways to make every day a holiday.
